

Danilea Werner, LCSW, received her PhD in Counseling and Family Therapy from Saint Louis University in Saint Louis, Missouri. She also received a MSW and MPH from Saint Louis University and a BA in psychology from Huntingdon College in Montgomery, Alabama. Dr. Werner's social work practice has been split between individual and family counseling and serving in public health roles. She recently served as the National Health Director for The OASIS Institute, a national non-profit providing education and volunteer opportunities for adults over 50. Previously, Dr. Werner worked in disaster preparedness and public health education. She continues to serve on the Empowering Young Women's conference committee, a conference dedicated to educating and empowering young women in the metropolitan Saint Louis area. Dr. Werner's research interests include older adults, adolescent female development, and mental health disaster preparedness.